

CHNED Launches Campaign to Raise Priority Level for Affordable Housing.

HAND News and Notes

July 27, 2010

The Coalition for Nonprofit Housing and Economic Development (CNHED) kicked off its "Continuum of Affordable Housing" campaign to raise the priority level of affordable housing for Washington, DC residents and triple local funding. CHNED released a policy paper that spells out a five-year schedule for achieving better funding and administration of the city's housing programs, produced a video capturing powerful stories of D.C. residents, and is holding rallies and using grassroots organizing to increase community and political support.
